Berkeley sticks its chin out and

The following editorial was obtained courtesy of The Daily Californian, Wednesday, April 17:

Don't go to class today! Show the University Administration you won't support their investments in South Africa. Show the University we will not allow our friends to be herded off to jail when they stand up for moral and ethical behavior.

The Administration treats students like children. When protests threaten to bring about real changes in public opinion, the Administration suddenly declares them illegal. They want "student input" only when it's non-controversial.

The University belongs to the students. If the Regents are going to create policies that are morally repugnant—like investing in South Africa—then they'll do it without our support. We're not going to attend.

The student strike is backed by several local unions, AGSE (Associated Graduate Student Employees), faculty members and almost the entire spectrum of campus organizations. We urge you to boycott your classes and attend the teach-ins.
